WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (IHT).

Mr. Nixon gave few specifics on U.S. proposals, saying that these would be delineated by Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz tomorrow.

He emphasized that any proposal at the conference that was thought to be damaging to the American economy would strongly rejected. The announcement that the United States would put forward reform proposals came as a surprise to most of the delegates to the annual meeting as there bad been no hint that Washington would present anything concrete at the conference,

It partly mollified some foreign critics who had accused the United States of foot-dragging on monetary reforms until other nations agreed to American terms on trade.

The President's speech keynoted the four-day conference aimed at restoration of a coherent system of exchange rates for the cur-rencies of the world's non-Communist nations. The previous system, set up just after World War II, was all but destroyed when President Nixon cut the dollar loose from gold in August of 1971 and an interim system put into effect at the beginning of 1972 has not yet had the desired stabilizing effect on the inter-national exchange rates.

In his address Mr. Nixon said: "We cannot afford a system that almost every year presents a new invitation to a monetary crisis." Issue That United Us'

Mr. McNamara called for a broad program of social justice and equity, saying that it would be a great mistake for the international development community to sit back and continue what had been done in the past. "It is the time for new approaches," he added.

The speech was described by bank officials as intended to focus a spotlight on what Mr. McNamara regards as a problem of major proportions, where, they said, there is inequality not only among nations but within nations among nations but within hations

He said that in the future all Asians being expelled from Uganda must take with them, Uganda to obtain exit clearance, sufficient money to purchase air, sea or rail tickets for themselves and their dependents.

The tickets would have to be purchased before the Asians left the bank premises, the spokesman added.

He also announced that all Asians being allowed to stay on here, either because they had proved their claims to Ugandan citizenship or because they had been exempted from the expulsion decree, would be required to purchase identity cards from the Immigration Department within

The airlift of British Asians from Uganda had its biggest day so far today with 450 booked to fly to London. But airline officials said there were still fewer passengers than seats.

Between 700 and 800 seats daily are available from tomorrow. Officials said there would be no difficulty in expanding the airlift to more than 1,000 daily if the demand warranted.

But last night and again today charter flights had to be canceled for lack of bookings-desplie the government's directive that all British Asians must leave the country within 48 hours of gctting exit clearance.

Officials said they thought the cancellation of two flights—both Fast African Airways charters— might be a result of banks being closed over the weekend, and of Asians being unable to wind up lheir affairs. In the case of the flight yesterday, they added, bookings had opened only 24 hours before the aircraft was due

French Bar Loan Of Mona Lisa for London Exhibit

PARIS, Sept. 25 (Reuters).— France has turned down a Brit-ish request that two of its most precious art treasures, Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa and the Bayeux tapestry, be shipped to London for an exhibition

The request was made through official British government chan-nels, with a view to including the Britain's entry into the Common Market in Janoary. But a senior French Foreign Ministry official eaid today: "There is no question of sending the Mona Lisa to London. "We shall not send an Italian masterplece to represent France at the London exhibition ... La Jocondo (Mona Lisa) will not leave the Louvre museum." The official said that the Bayeux tapestry was in a very poor state and could not stand a Channel crossing. "This is the reason why we cannot afford to ship this tapestry either,"

But the French are offering alternative art masterpieces. In-tricate negotiations are in full swing to work out which works should be allowed to leave France for the "Fanfare for Europe"

In a hlunt speech to 300 ex-ecutives from 108 world airlines, Mr. Heath made it clear that he is opposed to shackling the charter companies which are now capturing a rapidly growing share of the air travel market,

The speech was delivered at the opening of the 28th annual general meeting of the International Air Transport Association, which started a three-day session at London's Grosvenor House Hotel under an unusually heavy security

Mr. Heath took up a point made by Keith Granville, deputy chairman of the recently created British Airways Board (BOAC and BEA), who is taking over us this year's president of IATA. Mr. Granville spoke of the need for realism on the question of cost and fare levels.

"In my experience," Mr. Heath said, "realism today means all too often putting prices np. It could consist of straining every nerva to find ways and means of bringing prices down."

New Charters Rules

"Many governments, not least our own, are taking the lead in promoting new charter rules—the United Kingdom Civil Aviation Authority is not alone in its de-termination to see liberal new rules in operation next year... "Many voices are saying that changes such as these will mean the end of scheduled services as we know them today. Maybe, but what we must be as concerned with is the shaping of the kind of services that the public wants." Mr. Heath said scheduled services would no doubt continue to serve those with need for flexible who do not see why they should have to pay the added cost. "The consequence is obvious—if the scheduled carriers do not provide simple and inexpensive transport, these passengers will look elsewhere, and no one could blame them."

Disagreement Denied

Many delegates took the view that the contrasting emphasis is the speeches of Mr. Heath and Mr. Granville revealed a market division of opinion. But, at : press conference later, Mr. Granville insisted there was no rea, conflict.

He said that he meant to say that some fares will have to go up and others come down. The conference heard a repor by IATA Director General Knu Hammarskjold who said that growth remained low in 1971 but that some favorable trends appeared to be emerging.

"The industry is experiencing profitles: growth," he said. "Nevertheless, despite the persistent problems confronting the airlines there appears to be justification for some cautious optimism."

Mr. Hammerskjold said yester day before the meeting opened today that the non-Communis world's airlines earned a $112-million operating profit last year on revenues of $19.5 billion.

It was the industry'e wors showing since 1961, he said, and, after capital costs are amortized, the airlines will show an estimated net loss of 2.1 percent on

President Ferdinand Marcos, in announcing martial law, said he had ordered the arrest of those directly involved in a conspiracy to overthrow the government by violence and subversion.

The imposition of martial law followed months of increased activity by dissidents against government troops and a series of bombings damaging public and private installations in the Manila area.

Other automobile manufacturers, American and foreign, have said that the tough U.S. rules embodied in the Clean Air Act of 1970 could not be met by 1975-76. Until recently, even GM executives were saying they probably could not meet the pollution standards.

But GM now believes that, with its developments, emissions can be virtually eliminated from car exhaust. But the company believes it needs cooperation from the government and the petro-leum industry, because some changes, for example, must be made in fuel composition to allow the systems to work.

Details on the new emission control systems are tightly guarded. But tomorrow President Edward N. Cole will speak to the directors of the American Petroleum Institute to tell the gasoline makers what GM needs to make its systems work.

Catalytic Converters

It is known that a combination of catalytic converters and reactors would be used in a single car-for example, one system might clean the exhaust when the car is started, one system would clean fumes during the warmup period, and one during normal driving. A reactor is a small oven to burn off fumes; a converter uses a catalyst to encourage a chemical process that turns pollutants such as carbon monoxide and gasoline fumes into harmless carbon dioxide and water.

Expensive platinum and palladium are to be used as catalysts, and GM plans to buy 300,000 troy ounces of platinum and 120,000 troy ounces of palladium a year from South African producers for the converters. The development of such fume-killing devices does not au-tomatically mean the elimination of all auto emissions in a few

First, new gasoline formulas will have to be marketed. Lead is put into easoline to improve fuel performance, but it coats the

Also, the introduction of cleanburning engines will still leave 100 million older cars on the road, although a sizable proportion of these already carry equipment to reduce polintants.

And it is likely that the new devices, in their first year at least, may not work as well as the car maker hopes because

U.S. Source Says Oufkir Was Killed

By David B. Ottaway

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (WP).
Gen. Mohammed Oufkir, the military strongman of Morocco who was officially reported to have committed suicide after the recent attempt on King Harsan's life, was actually shot to death at the king's order, according to U.S. diplomatic sources-

The Moroccan government ei-most immediately identified the general as the leader of the plot to kill the king last Aug. 16. But It went to great lengths to convince the world that his death was a "suicide of treason."

"We did not kill him," Moroc-can Interior Minister Mohammed Benhime insisted at a press conference Aug. 18,

Natural Nuclear Reaction On Earth Reported by French SALT Pact

By Walter Sullivan

-A leading French scientist reported today that a natural. spontaneously-ignited nuclear reactor apparently operated in an African uranium deposit many millions of years ago.

The evidence for such a chain reaction in a Gabon mine was described to the French Academy of Sciences in two papers presented by Dr. Francis Perrin, former chairman of the French High Commission for Atomic Energy.

When Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, former head of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and a Nobel laureate for his work on heavy elements, was told of the discovcry he said: "That is fantastic." However, he added that if any atomic explosions occurred, they were probably little more than

Markedly Depleted

The first clue was the observation at the French uranium enrichment center at Fierrelatte 40 miles north of Franceville, in Gabon, had a peculiar composition. It was markedly depleted in the uranium 235 extracted for bombs or, in weaker mixtures, for power plants. It was difficult to explain this unless some of it had been "burned" in a chain reaction. Furthermore, the investigators at the French atomic center at Cadarache found four other rere elements -neodymium, samarium, europium and cerium-in forms that are typically the residue of tranium breakdown.

The unusual composition of the Oklo urenium, which has only been mined since 1969, struck the analysis because all uranium, as it comes from the ground anywhere on earth-or even as It is found by astronants on the moon -has the same proportion of uranium 235-0.72 percent,

The reason, presumably, is that all uranium in the solar system was formed at the same time, However, the form known as uranium 235 (because it has 235 neutrons and protons in its nncleus) is radioactive and is slowly depleting, relative to more stable forms of that element, through radioactive decay. Whereas natural uranium today contains only 0.72 percent of uranium 235, some 1.7 billion rears ago it constituted 3 per-cent. Had there been a nuclear power industry at that time, it would have been unnecessary to enrich the raw uranium. It could have been used directly as fuel in water-moderated reactors.

Hence, it is suspected that the spontaneous chain reaction began approximately at that time. How-

NEW YORK, Sept 25 (NYT), ever, specialists in reactor engineeriog said today they were puzzled as to how this could have occurred in a deposit with only 3 percent of the fissionable > uranium. As Dr. Scaborg pointed out, in a reactor hurning such fuel, "you have to have things exactly right. Water or some other 'moderator" is needed to slow down the neutrons released as each atom is split so that they are not moving too fast for absorption by other atoms to sustain the chain reaction.

Furthermore, the moderator and the fuel must be extremely pure. Even a few parts per million of a contaminant, such as boron, will "poison" the reaction, bringing it to a halt. How the necessary conditions could arise underground under natural circumstances, said Dr. Seaborg, is reall; puzzling."

Dr. Perrin, in the discussion thet followed presentation of the papers, prepared by two teams of scientists, proposed that water filtering down through the uranium hed acted as e moderator, or neutron-slower. When the reaction ran fast enough to convert the water to steam, the reaction halted until the deposit cool-

"I thus believe." he said, "the fossil pile at Oklo must have functioned intermittently, pusat-ing, as it were."

Dr. Seaborg, commenting along similar lines, said that if the reection ever became intense enough to constitute an explosion, it would have shattered to fuel before a really big blast could de-

A challenge to designers of the first atomic bomb was to create an implosion that would hold the fuel together for the fraction of a second necessary for a full chain reaction. Furthermore, a repetition of the phenomeuon is presumably ruled out because the rew uranium of today is no longer rich enough for such a reaction, The uranium from Oklo shows levels of uranium 235 that range from 0.621 to 0.730 percent. The question arises whether other such deposits exist and Dr. Perrin said that the search is already on, They are only likely to occur in uranium beds dating back to when the natural abundance of uranium 235 was still high, The Oklo deposit is about 1.7 billion years

The French scientists were quoted as saying the chain reactions must have begun at least several hundred million years ago and probably more than a billion years ago. They may have lasted several million years until the fissionable uranium was

House Passes As Amended

Nuclear Equality Is Accepted, 306-4

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP), -The five-year U.S.-Soviet agreement to freeze the number of intercontinental nuclear missiles and missile-firing submarines was approved today by Congress.

A Senate resolution approving the accord to limit strategic arms but urging the President to seek equel, not inferior, U.S. nuclear forces in any permanent arms limitation treaty was accepted by the House and sent to President Nixon. The vote was 306-4.

The Foreign Affairs Committee chairman, Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D., Pa., told the House that he considered some of the Senate restrictions unnecessary but urged the House to accept them to speed U.S.-Soviet talks this fall. Senate approval of the accord was delayed for weeks amid controversy over the amendment by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D., Wash., urging equality for offensive nuclear forces in a further treaty. The interim agreement limits the Soviet Union to 1.618 landfired missiles and the United States to 1,054. It limits the Soviet Union to 62 submarines with up to 950 missiles and the United States to 44 supmarines with up to 950 missiles. The amendment further notes that the U.S.-Soviet defensive anti-missile treaty, also signed in Moscow on May 26, limits each country to two anti-missile sites.

primary career defying tha public-opinion polls, it is not surprising to find him doing the same in the decisive campaign. But others have a different concern over the effect of opinion-sampling practices on the electoral process, particularly when the results are so unanimously lop-sided as they have been recently in favor of President Nixon. Do the polis themselves, they ask, infinence potential voters? Is it really legitimate to set up what is in effect an unofficial voting system in advance of the actual balloting?

The same question has been asked, in closer races, about the practices of television and other media in extrapolating early voting results and announcing them when the polling places are still open in Western or other late-voting states. And admittedly there is no easy answer. It is quite possible that some voters are affected by an appearance of victory on one side or the other, and prefer to join the crowd.

The polisters themselves, naturally, deny that this "bandwagon syndrome" is important—and it is probable that they are right. Before modern sampling techniques were introduced, predictions about the results of elections were made on the basis of political savvy, a keen knowledge of how key districts had voted in the past and what their vote might indicate for the future, and the predictions, based on simple arithmetical projections, were often astonishingly accurate.

Morever, massive opinion surveys were made many years ago, without any perceptible effect upon the final tally. The notorious poll conducted by the Literary Digest facts as they emerged long ago.

Since Sen. McGovern made a successful magazine a poll which had won considerable repect-in 1936 is an example of that. The magazine's bad guess about Franklin D. Roosevelt's chances in that campaign did the Literary Digest far more harm than it helped Alf Landon.

> Marketing and opinion studies have reached a high degrea of statistical excellence. One may argue (in fact, it has been done) that packaging and marketing a presidential candidate by the use of such techniques is an affront to the political system. But something like it is old in democratic history, and it must be assumed that the opinion poll is here to stay-unless all the polls combine to make some monstrous mistake. beyond the limitations of time and percentage of error that is inherent in modern opinion-testing methodology. After all, the polls state no more than at a given time a particular candidate has certain strengths and weakenesses; he may overcome the weaknesses or enhance the strengths, and in any case a margin of, say, 3 percent, pins or minus, for error could be very important in a close contest

> The present presidential campaign is unusual in the wide margin against Sen. Mc-Govern. He may yet trim it down. Bnt, in pre-polling days, a professional politician might well have come to the same general conclusion as the polls, based on his knowledge of voting groups and how they react to certain issues and personality traits. In fact, that is just what a considerable number of Democratic politicians did when Mr. Mc-Govern was nominated. What the senator has to do in November is to triumph, not over the polis, but over some stark political

WASHINGTON.—Favoritism was the charge leveled against the administration's treatment of the hig grain dealers who profited so handsomely in the recent Russian wheat deal-No one seriously contended that a crime had been committed.

The President was asked about all this in his news conference of Aug. 29. He made what he called a "categorical" statement that "no one in this administration, presently employed, was involved in this very bigarre inci-

At the same news conference Mr. Nixon dealt with charges thet the administration might cover up the investigation. As barriers against a whitewash, he cited "a full field investigation by the FBI" and prosecution by the Justice Department.

But now it comes out that the Justice Department has not pressed those indicted for the breakin on the source of their funds. Mr. Stans, who is a potential source, has issued statements to the press but refused to be questioned. And The Washington Post has developed a story to the effect that Robert Mardian, a former assistant attorney general and leading figure in the re-election campaign, directed the tinent to the Watergate affair.

Then there is the matter of Gen. John Levelle, the Air Force bombing of North Vietnam. The White House has taken the posttion that it was a one-man operation involving complicated orders which was suitably disposed of within the military.

In fact, it is clear that many. many officers were involved. There was an attempt by Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John Ryan to cover the affair np with the Congress. Gen. Ryan's action-was apparently inspired by civilian authorities. The indications are that those civilian authorities were not at the Pentagon, as many of us thought, but at the White House.

As a final case, there was the bitter argument last month about the bombing of North Vietnam and the dike system in the Red River Valley. The serious charge, the charge made explicitly UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, is that the bombing endangered the dikes.

But President Nixon chose to make it seem that the issue was whether the bombing of the dikes was deliberate. In his press conference of July 27, Mr. Nixon gave one answer which went on for 24 paragraphs without once acknowledging that we were indeed hitting the dikes or that the bombing did, as Waldheim truly asserted, endanger the dike

Nixon Ethic

What emerges from all this is the Nixon ethic. In every instance, the President and his men obscure moral issues. They reply forthrightly to charges not made. When it happens to them to tell the truth, the truth they tell is not the whole truth.

Exactly why this is so baffles me. The President's sense that people are out to get him—they kick him around, as he once put It-probably plays a part. So does the will to win and the emphasis on being first. But even allowing for all these things, I really don't understand the constant disposition to hedge the truth, to be disingenuous, to con

What I do understand is that the public morality has been debased. There is something dirty about Washington these days, and while I don't suppose Mr. Nixon is entirely to blame, neither do I see how he can be altogether divorced from respon-

First comes a woman'e voice on the loudspeakere mounted throughout the city: "Enemy planes 80 kilometers (50 miles) northeast of the capital." Then: "Sixty kilometers (37 miles) to the northeast."

Then, if the Hanoi area is the target this time and the planes keep coming, the siren howls. Most of the truck and bicycle traffic stope. People gather near bomb shelters.

If the planes are actually seen or heard, or if the bomb explosions souhri close, some persons actually go downstairs into the dark, dank group shelters or climb into the sidewalk manhole shelters, many of which have a few inches to a foot of rainwater

The bombs this time were at a distance. The government later reported that the nearest casualdes were nine persons killed in a northern siburban district called Dong Anh-the mother, father and four children in one family and three children in another.

After the planes sped off and the all-clear sounded, Hanoi returned to the calm of a Sunday morning that had begun with the tolling of the Roman Catholic cathedral bells for 4:30 and 5:30 a.m. masses

Three hundred persons had attended the first mass and 500 the second, including many children and young men and women as well as the elderly. Their chanting and singing indicated that they knew the service well. Many parked their bicycles in the

Countdown at the UN

The United States is on a collision course with the rest of the world at the newly convened session of the United Nations General Assembly. Unless there is some accommodation on both sides, the results could seriously injure both the world organization and the international standing of the United .

At issue is the size of the U.S. contribution to the UN budget. Prodded by Congress and leaning on the recommendations of a presidential commission, the Nixon administration is determined to press the assembly for a reduction in the U.S. share of the ass budget from 31.5 percent to 25 percent. The move is certain to be resisted by other; nations, many of whom are already paying more than their fair share of UN costs based on the usual criteria of ability to pay. Tha commission that recommended the 25 percent ceiling on assessed UN contributions last year stipulated that it should be negotiated "over a period of years," not overnight. Based on the ability-to-pay criteria, the United States should be contributing more than its current assessment-probably in the area of 35 percent. A more reasonable and realistic terget-for both the United Nations and the United States-woold be a gradual reduction toward the 25 percent level, beginning with a cutback to 28 percent during the next three-year assessment period which begins in 1974. This goal should be attainable without undue hardship to others because of increased contributions from anticipated new members and more affluent old members.

There is merit which other members cannot sensibly ignore in th administration's argument that it is unhealthy for the United Nations to be as heavily dependent on the contributions of any one state as is now the case with the United States. Furthermore, it would be unrealistic for other members to discount the very real problem that any administration would have in trying to justify before Congress tha current high level of U.S. assessments, especially in view of the diminishing capacity of this country to influence budgetary and other UN decisions under existing voting arrangements.

But these considerations hardly justify the scope and abruptness of Washington's present demand. A more drastic cutback probably could be achieved only through arbitrary action, placing the United States in violation of its charter commitments. Such action would be a severe blow to the shaky morale and financial position of the world organization. It would only accelerate what Hamilton Fish Armstrong, the retiring editor of Foreign Affairs magazine, has warned is the growing isolation of the United States from other nations.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Gen. Amin's Assault on Uganda

Few governments have outlawed themselves so quickly and conclusively as that of Uganda, the former British colony in East Africa. In rapid succession, its leader. Gen. Idi Amin, has expelled thousands of long-resident Aslans, both those who kept their old British passports and those who had acquired Ugandan cltizenship; landed Hitler for "burning" six million . ews (earlier he had ousted 700 key Israeli technical advisers); and arrested a number of Americans and other foreigners.

Apparently to exploit the thrmoil, a force of Ugandan exiles loyal to Milton Obote, the Uganda president whom Gen. Amin deposed in a coup last year, launched an invasion from neighboring Tanzania. But for the disturbing factor that a sovereign state facilitated the invasion of a neighbor, one could have wished that the Obote forces would triumph. But they apparently have not, or at least not yet. Gen. Amin Lemains in Kampala, hysterical but still in power. By the ferocity of his physical and verbal assaults on his citizens both black and Asian in ancestry, and by his willingness to trifle with his country's economic welfara and political stability, General Amin has established himself as a unique figure in contemporary black Africa. Any earlier tempincy to accord him a certain limited understanding for moving against Asians holding British passports who occupied leading roles in the Ugandan economy has had to yield to condemnation for his arbitrary use of power. It is in character that his most prominent supporter has been Libya's President Moamer Qadhafi, who tried to send him five planeloads of soldiers and arms: Sudan, whose territory the planes were overflying without permission, grounded them.

In situations like these, outsiders are prone to reflect on the great inherent difficulties of congnering a colonial heritage and creating a viable new society. In this instance, however, the particular personality of the nation's leader deserves a prominent part of the blame. It is, of course, entirely a matter for Ugandans to determine. And yet, it can hardly escape the notice of any independent, ontside bystander that the sooner Gen. Amin departs office, the better off his country is bound to be.

WASHINGTON—Despite the made House decision-making far inevitable focus on the presidential race, there's reason to think the more important phase of the 1972 election may be the contests for the House of Representatives. The House has been changing more rapidly than any other part of the government in the past four years, and the changes in store this year seem likely to dwarf those of the past.

The House is the point-of-entry for the young men and women coming into national politics, and it reflects generational change more quickly than the Senate or the bureaucracy of the executive

The "new breed" congressmen share the-restlessness of the post-

Kennedy generation, the men who believed, whatever their party, that John Kennedy was right 10 years ago when he said 'a new generation" was coming to power, and who ask now, a decade later, why it has not yet come to DR.SE.

They've expressed their impatience in positive ways, bringing more reform to the House in the past four years than it had seen in half a century. Among other things, they have made the first serious dent in the antomatic seniority system, distributed legislative power by limiting the number of committee and subcommittee leadership spots a single

HANOL Sept. 25 (AP).—Pre-mier Pham Van Dong reasserted yesterday to a delegation of Americans here in Hanoi to escort home three released fliers that remaining pilots would be freed when an agreement is reached to settle the war.

In a 90-minute informal discossion attended by this reporter, Premier Dong told anti-war so tivists Cora Welss, David Dellin-ger, the Rev, William Sloans Coffin and Prof. Richard Palk that a framework for negotiating a settlement to the war had long been available,

That was the seven-point proposal put forward by the Provimonal Revolutionary Government (Viet Cong) that calls for the total withdrawal of American forces and the formation of a coalition government.

Premier Dong stressed the im portance of the Sept. 11 clarification statement put forward by the Viet Cong delegation chief, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, in Paris that describes procedures by which a three-party coalition could be formed.

39 Foe of Nazis, Romanian Envoy

Tilea, 76, Dead;

LONDON, Sept. 25 (AP).— Viorel Virgil Tilea, 78, an enemy of Nazi Germany as ambassador in London in 1939, has died here, As ambassador, he exceeded instructions from Bucharest and asked for a British gesture of interest in a southeastern Europe threatened by Hitler's expansion. He informed the British government that Romania was threatened with the same denger that had destroyed Czechoslovakia

But, at home, German-Romanian negotiations culminated in the treaty that made Romania an economic satellite of Germany. During World War II, Mr. Tilea remained in London in charge of the "free Romania" movement. When liberation brought Com-munism, he stayed here, writing and lecturing and maintaining contact with the anti-Communist Romanian opposition.

Scanty Soviet Grain Crop Suffers Final Blow

By Stephens Broening MOSCOW, Sept. 25 (AP).-Bao weather and disorganization are threatening the wheat crop in several key grain-growing areas that were counted on to save the Soviet Union's 1972 harvest from being a disaster.

A stunted, scorched crop in the traditional wheat producing areas of European Russia has already forced the Soviet Union to buy more than one billion dollars worth of grain from America, Canada and Australia.

Soviet leaders had hoped that the later-ripening grain in Siberia, the southern Urals and Kazakhsten would offset some of these losses.

However, Soviet press reports on the harvest in these areas paint a picture of chaos. mismanagement and demoralization. In a front-page article today, the Communist party paper, Pravda, told of wet grain lying in the fields of Siberia. with workers hesitating to thresh it, of shortages of driers at grain elevators, of trucks wasting time in line because of poor schedul-

21 soldiers were arrested. Another mob fight broke out at Stuttgart on Aug. 12, the Army paper said, when 75 to 100 black soldiers gathered to protest the arrest of a black soldier. Thirteen blacks and 10 German policemen were injured in an ensuing brawl, and 13 blacks were arrested by the German police.

The report said that a group of 10 to 15 blacks assaulted a white sergeant on Aug. 27 at Bamberg and, shortly afterward, a group of 20 to 30 blacks assaulted five white soldiers, stabbing one. The Army said that the group grew and proceeded to the post dispensary where it broke windows and overturned a Volkswagen.

Looking Back on the Life of Chanel

By Hebe Dorsey PARIS, Sept. 25 (IHT).—A contested will, a persistent rumor. of German links and the postponement of an official exhibition on her life and work have many people wondering about the real flurry of books about her. One forthcoming book, "Les Années Chanel" (Mercure de France), by French journalist Pierre Galante, alleges that she had an affair, at the age of 63, with 'a dangerous agent of the German information service." In another, by Goncourt Prize-winner Edmonde Charles-Roux, it is suggested that the "affair" was no affair but an "amorous friend-

Some answers may come from

Meanwhile. Chanel's former butler, François Mironnet, now living in Saint-Tropez, is fight-ing her will. It has been said that, like some other employees, he is piqued by Mademoiselle's "ingratitude." Be that as it may, the case will come up in court Oct. 11 in Paris, according to Mr. Mironnet's lawyer, François Manderieux, who refused further comment. Characterizing the suit as "a lot of wind," Chanel's great niece Gabrielle (Tiny) Labrunie said, "It doesn't hold together. Mironnet pretends that my aunt made a will in his favor in 1966—and that the will was found in a book. I just got the opinion of the experts and we know for sure it (the will) is a fake. If he has any sense, he will not pursue the to Pierre Galante's as yet unpublished book-it is to appear in French bookstores in November and in the United States in Pebruary—this was a way for her to evade French taxes.

Under this will, the Swiss executor was to take care of various Chanel employees, "but Mr. Mironnet was not listed," Mrs. Labrunie said.

Probably unrelated to all this, Chanel retrospective scheduled next month at the Musée Gal-liers is said to have been postponed until 1973. The show a homage to Chanel, was to be an official accolade. The idea came from Alain Trapenard, director of the Beaux-Arts Department of the city of Paris. Reportedly, Mrs. Georges Pom-pidou was to inaugurate the ex-

Yvonne Designores, circutor of the Union Française des Arts du Costume, a private institution, had been working on the exhibition—gathering stacks of documents, including original draw-ings signed by Chanel-when, she said, she was told to stop. Miss Designdres also got 40 dresses from the house of Chanel. Ex-model Bettina posed in 10 of them for photographer Henry Clarke. One of the dresses was a 1915 model that the house had had to dimlicate because the original had disappeared. Miss Designdres said that she was told on Aug. 1 that the show

From her home in Sardinia, Bettina said: "I'm very surprised. The whole thing seems to be called off. I don't know what's going on. I called the house of Chanel and got a very vague answer. I have the impression that there is a problem with the name of Chanel. Maybe a book that's coming out."

The official version from Mr. Trapenard is that the show has not been canceled, "simply postponed because we want to do a large retrospective on Chanelnot just the couture side of her life but Chanel as a Parisian personality. We have to gather a great number of documents. many of which are abroad. That's why we think we will hold the Chanel show in 1973 at the earliest in June, but more likely in

Although experts point out that an exhibition of this sort usually takes months-even years to assemble, the rumor about the German link persists, doubt-less fed by speculation on what Mr. Galante and Miss Charles-Roux may have written about Chanel.

In a long chapter, entitled demoiselle's Exile), Mr. Galante says that the man with whom Coco fell in love" was Hans Gunther von Dincklage, "Several enquiries of the French counterespionage show Spatz-Dincklage as a likely agent of the Gestapo, and, in any case, an important agent of the Abwehr, under the orders of Colonel Wasg."

Operation Closed

On the eve of World War II, Chanel was at the height of her fame. She closed her couture hers was the only conture house to shut during the warand moved into the Ritz Hotel in Paris, many of whose rooms were commandeered by the Germans. As Enid Nemy put it in her article for The New York Times (Jan. 12, 1971), "Miss Chanel remained there, then went on to Vichy and to Switzerland but the record of her life for 15 years is more blurred than usual." Chanel re-opened her couture house on Feb. 5, 1954.

Mr. Galante, who says that he had access to the Dincklage file (of which he says he possesses photocopies) is the first to present Chanel's wartime friend in a crude light.

Two previous books, "Chanel" Solitaire," by Claude Baillen and "Coco Chanel, Secrete," by Marcel Haedrich, skirted the problem. For Mr. Hasdrich Dincklage (whom he refers to only by initials) was a harmless, ageing playboy, nicknamed Spatz (Sparrow) by his friends. "He loved esting, wines, cigars and beautiful clothes. . . Thanks to Coco he had an easy life . . . (he) waited for her in her salon. In civilian ciothes. Champagne or whiskey? He lighted a cigar. He kissed Coco's hand. 'How are you this morning?' Because they spoke English. He is not German, his mother was British." Claude Baillen, in her book, never mentions the man.

In Mr. Galante's opinion, Spatz was dangerous. "Spearhead of the fifth column," he writes, "he (Spatz) also worked under Goebbels. His role? Spread defeatist propaganda in French circles."

'An Interview

Speculation about what Mr. Galante might have said-but, in fact did not-may have some thing to do with the rumor circulating in Paris that Chanel herself might have worked for the Germans, Women's Wear Daily, the New York garment industry newspaper, put the question buntly to Edmonde Charles-Roux. Was Coco Chanel, Paris's greatest conturière, really an agent for the Gestapo?" "Utter non-sense," Miss Charles-Roux told WWD (Sept. 18.) "Everyone knows she lived with a high-

Royal Opera Opens Season With 'Trojans,' 'Taverner'

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON, Sept. 25 (IHT).—Possibly estering to the truly remarkable atomism of British audiences, the Royal Opera, Covent Garder, has opened its new season with Berlioz's "The Trojans" and Pete Maxwell Davis's "Taverner." Not until "The Marriage of Figaro on Oct. 16 will there be any other opera.

on Oct. 16 will there be any other opers.

The early autumn season is usually devoted to a "Ring" cycle but this is an off year for Wagner, with a new "Ring" in preparation That "The Trojans" begins at 6 p.m. and lasts until after 1, with a 35-minute buffet break at 7.30, must have made it seem a likely substitute. While "Taverner," which had a premiere in July, i about half as long it manages, easily, to seem longer.

British affection for "The Trojans" is of long standing, and despite the opera's length and occasional longueurs, understandable The Royal Opera, in 1957, became the first house anywhere to give it "more or less in its entirety" in a single evening. In 1965 Berlion's centensry, the Scottish Opera gave the first production in which "every single note of the score was heard," although th; language was English. The Royal Opera, a few months later, offered The Trojans' complete in French.

Two Operas

The French, in Berlioze time, discerned in his massive score, and quite perceptively, not one opera, but two: "The Capture of Troy's and "The Trojans in Carthage." Only the latter was performed during his lifetime. Subsequently, until the Royal Opera production of 1957, "The Trojans" was played, when played at all, on two suc-

American Television Crew Films 'Cole Porter's Paris' By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

TOARIS (IHT). Cole Porter spent a fair share of .his life in Paris. Between the wars, he owned a town house on the Rue Monsieur. Later, after he had sold it, he returned to Paris for long visits and maintained that his permanent address was "Rits Bar, Paris."

At the moment, an American television company is here try-ing to recepture Cole Porter's Paris on film for an NBC-TV spectacular. "It is not a biography," explained producer-director, Joseph Cates. This is reassuring for Hollywood, once produced a screen biography of Porter that the subject found utterly ridiculous

Among those who are par-ticipating in the film: Diahann Carroll, Connie Stevens, Twiggy, Perry Como, Louis Jourdan and Charles Aznavour. The sites of the show will be the Boulevard Montparnasse, the Champs-Elysees, the park at St. Cloud, the Tuileries, Maxim's and Orly air-

Porter's songs, said Mr. Cates, "are as popular as ever at home and here. Youngsters like them. though they never saw a Porter show. Perry Como sings 'C'est Magnifique,' I Love Paris'; Dishann, Night and Day and many others. Ashavour will do What Is This Thing Called Love, and Louis Jourdan, Just

was close and fruitful. He com-posed many of his celebrated scores in his preferred city and giorified it in his lyrics and music, most resoundingly perhaps in "I Love Paris." Paris brought him theatrical luck. "Paris" was in fact the title of his first Broadway hit in 1928 in which the French ster, Irene Bordoni, rolling her dark, bedroom eyes and suggestively rais-ing her plucked eyebrows, sang. "Let's Do It" and Tve Got Quelque Chose." Before that several Porter numbers had been incorporated in New York musicals. After 1828 there was a new Porter musical almost an-nually: "Pirty Million Frenchmen" in 1929 with Genevieve Tobin and William Gaxton introducing "You Do Samething To "The Gay Divorcee" with Fred Astaire vocalizing and danc-ing "Night and Day," "The New Yorkers"; "Anything Goes" (containing "You're the Top" and "I Get a Kick Out of You"); "Jubilee" (in which "Begin the Beguine" was first heard);

"Nymph Errant," "Red, Hot and Blue," "You Never Know" and "Du Barry Was a Ledy," all written in the Rue Monsieur,

"Kiss Me Kate," a postwar Porter smash, was "The Taming of the Shrew" in musical comedy form, but his last two shows-"Can Can" and "Silk Stockings," which was "Ninotchka" set to song and dance—had Paris as their scene. Oddly enough, none of the great Porter musicals has ever been seen on the Parisian stage, though they have play-Europe from Stockholm to Madrid The first all-Porter show was given in Paris at the Ambassadeurs in 1927 under the

$700,001 for Paper Rights to His Unpublished Novel By Israel Shenker

NEW YORK CHYT).-"The Camerons," a novel by Robert Crichton that will be called oldfashioned, has just brought a price that is strictly new-fashioned: $700,001.

Warner Paperback Library signed to pay Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., that much for the paperback rights, introducing Mr. Crichton to that charmed circle where a man's words are as good as gold.
The $1 was added to the $700,-000 to get the price above the rounder sum that may have been paid to others for paperback rights. Mr. Crichton said he thought this was "showboating," that he would therefore pass the buck. He will still get two-thirds of the sale price, the other third going to his publisher. After taxes, he should be left with about $200,000

Seventy-five thousand hardcover copies to sell at $7.95 each have been printed in preparation for the Nov. 9 publication date.

Month Club, and parts will ap-pear in the Ladies Home Journal, Playboy and the Reader's Digest -suggesting that the book's appeal is catholic.

"I'm gratified by the premature acceptance," said Mr. Crichton, "But I'm also conscious that people will say 'The Camerons' is not breaking new grounds, as though breaking new ground is the only good thing.

"I'll start hearing the bugaboo words which will make the book unacceptable to some people—'a good old-fashioned story," a spellbinding yarn.' The better done the more scorned, in certain circles, and my neck is bared for the blow!

Story-telling is "a matter of genetic hunger," he insisted. "You can't go to a dinner party without hearing story after story," he said: "If you say someone's a threw in the bad guy, you'll have to explain and Tolstoy."

Thank God the anti-novel novelists who see no pattern, no action, no beginning, no end, are finally under heavy attack. Things do happen; there are efforts made; there are successes and failures. All the world's not a stage for sensitive natures moon-ing about intent. The ultimate thing is what people do, not what they think they do. He does not want to be classed with other moneyed story-tellers such as Harold Robbins and Irving Wallace:

"All you have to do is read-20 pages of "The Camerons" and you'll see the difference between my work and that of Robbins and Wallace. But I'm not going to be like Erich Segal, who, when-ever he talked about himself, threw in the names of Dostoevsky

Mr. Crichton even draws a dis-inction between what he calls new money and old money. money is where you have already found your tax havens, where most of your money is capital gains. But if you try to live off income the successful writer earns less than a teacher or fireman or even a coal miner."

His previous payday came in 1966 with the success of his novel "The Secret of Santa Vittoria." which grossed about a million dollars and netted Mr. Crichton after texes—roughly $400,000.
Amortised over the years it took to write, the book just about covered the cost of his New York City household, which includes a wife and four growing children.

"I'm a close man with a kopeck," he said. "I spend nothing and like to spend less, but about two more years and I'd have been back against the wall. Pompous as it sounds, the success of my new book gives me a chance to write another good book, which is the only thing I

Gold Drop Tied to Soviet Comment

By Clyde H. Farnsworth ZURICH (NYT).—A week ago the price of gold plummeted 8 percent from $56 to $61.25 an ounce, a considerable drop for any commodity, let alone a metal that still represents some of the wealth of nations. Now the market is back under control, and the Zurich dealers feel a lot better. The prica is now around $63.50 an ounce. What went wrong had some of the elements of a James Bond thriller, as dealers reconstructed

Although it could not be immediately confirmed, the word was that an economist for the Moscow Narodny Bank of London is on the carpet. The Soviet bank is embarrassed because its quarterly economic review caused the avalanche of selling. ". The price which would prevail if all South African output were sold is around $50 per ounce, and this price (corrected for infla-tion) should, everything being equal, be re-established when and if South Africa resumes a full sales policy," the bank's review said. The Soviet Union has made no secret of its belief that the price of gold is too low. Its direct interests are involved because gold sales in Zurich are one means that Moscow has of financing purchases of goods from the West, such as the massive quantities of grain it has just contracted to buy.

The higher the gold price the more Moscow

When Edouard P. Gostov, president of Woz-chod Handelsbank A.G., the Russians' Zurichbased bank, which sells the gold, was asked what he thought of the Moscow Narodny reasoning, he replied, in English: "I think it's nutty."

Against the known Soviet position on the matter, the Moscow Narodny statement had an enormous psychological impact on the market, Said the chief of one gold-dealing department of a major bank: "Buyers sav: $50 an ounce and

There was one theory in Zurich that because of an internal bureaucratic struggle, Moscow Narodny was trying to undermine the position of its sister bank, the Wozchod, by driving down the price while the Wozchod was selling.
The Russians used to sell most of their gold in London, but now they use Zurich-taking advantage of Swiss banking secrecy-2 development that could have given rise to some jealousy by the Narodny bank. But this reasoning was too far-fetched for most people, as was the theory that the Russians were testing the market for future sales.

The majority view of the gold specialists here was that the Moscow Narodny analysis appeared as a sheer blunder, a result of in-adequate control over the contents of the review

Both the Wozchod and the Narodny are stateowned institutions controlled by the Soviet state bank and the Soviet foreign trade organization. They form part of a network of Soviet banks in the West, their function being to help finance East-West trade.

After a long absence from the gold market, the Russians began selling relatively large quantities of gold in 1971, according to the Bank for International Settlements in Base! It placed Russian sales last year at $100 million, against $550 million in 1965, the last time the Soviets were in the market in a major way. Great secrecy shrouds the Russian transactions. Worchod will not even confirm that it acts in

As to Moscow Narodny's reference to South Africa, a major supplier of gold, over the last few years, until the end of 1971, South Africa sold all of her newly mined gold.

Now, however, strengthened by favorable trade and balance-of-payments figures, the South Africans are putting newly mined gold into their

The Brussels-based Kredietbank, working from weekly South African reserve statements, bas deduced that between April and June, 1972, about one-third of the production was used to replenish reserves. In July and August there was almost no gold sold on the free market.

It was this sort of information that was apparently in the back of the mind of the Moscow Narodny analyst in predicting the plunge to $50 if all South African gold were sold to the market.

The projected government-CBI-TUC program of restraint would not have the force of law but would depend entirely on the voluntary cooperation of the three parties whose leaders would have the tough job of selling it to their followers.

Mr. Heath's talks with CBI and TUC leaders already have produced agreement in principle on three central problems:

• The shared interest of fighting inflation, now rising at 10 percent a year.

The need to improve the situation of the nation's lowestpaid groups.

• Introduction of a system of voluntary restraints on all forms of income coupled with new curbs on price increases.

Any meaningful three-way announcement after tomorrow's meeting would be reinforced in the eyes of wage-earners if the government were to link such a program with a statement of its own intentions on other key sectors of the economy. That is,

Big Oil, Gas Light Selling Drives In North Sea

More Testing Needed To Assess Value

LONDON, Sept. 25 (AP).-An Anglo-American oil consortium reported yesterday it bad found major oil and natural gas deposits under the North Sea 100 miles southeast of the Shetland Islands.

A spokesman for Mobil Oil North Sea said a test well drilled in 384 feet of water bad produced a flow rate of up to 3,400 barrels a day of low-sulphur oil.

The British state-owned Gas Council and Amoco Petroleum each have nearly 26 percent in the consortium. Mobil holds 20 percent, Amerada 18 percent and the rest is held by Texas Eastern.

Major Oil Zooe The northern sector of the North Sea is becoming one of that world's major oil zones. The big-gest deposits found so far have been by British Petroleum, off the eastern Scottish coast, ex-pected to yield 400,000 barrels a day, and the Shell-Esso Brent field 100 miles northeast of the Sbetlanda with an expected dally yield of 300,000 barrels. Oil experts said the Mobil find would probably match these.

Mobil added that the well flowed at a rate of 3,400 barrels daily on one test and at 3,200 a day nn another, with 1,050 cubic feet of gas per barrel of nil on both North-South were using the Precision system. One club was artificial, showing 16 points or more. The two-diamond response showed eight or more points and five or more diamonds. Two spades and three hearts were natural bids, and North used Blackwood to reach six hearts.

The slam is slightly optimistic, but will apparently succeed as the cards lie. Declarer's normal play is to cash the two high trumps and when the queen does not fall he will have to bring home the diamond suit without loss.

The correct technique is to play the king first and then lead the jack, intending to finesse if it is not covered. This line will produce five diamond tricks any

But the situation changed when West made the normal opening lead of a small club, the only suit that had not been bid naturally. Dummy's queen won the first trick and declarer's chances, looking only at the North-South cards, had improved considerably. Rather than rely on the risky diamond finesse, he could now discard one of dummy's diamonds on the club ace and trump a diamond in dummy. All he needed was a normal three-two diamond After eashing the two high trumps, declarer took the diamond king and led a diamond to the ace. West trumped this with the heart queen and returned the king of clubs. Declarer won in the closed hand, discarding a diamond as planned from dunmy. Now he was able to establish his diamonds by ruffing twice in dummy, but he had no way to dispose of the club ten and West won the setting trick with his jack. With any other lead, South

WHERE THE WASTELAND ENDS

Politics and Transcendence in Post-Industrial Society

By Theodore Roszak. Doubleday. 492 pp. $10. (Second in a two-part review)

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

N yesterday's review of the first half of "Where the Wasteland Ends' we found the religious impulse extled from post-industrial culture, the intellect divorced from our "visionary powers and energies of transcendence." The fate of the soul, said Mr. Roszak, is the fate of the social order, and only a religious renewal-in his special sense-will generate our next politics and perhaps the final radicalism of our society. The sensibility that accompanies technological omnipotence lacks both the tragic dimension and the regenerativo imagination that oculd save us from the feeling of nihilism and absurdity that has labeled ours the Age of Anxiety and the Age of Longing. Without rapture or participa-tion—what the author calls "sacramental consciousness"—knowledge can only be functional. ce, as he puts it, has become our religion simply because we cannot see around it. We have been fed the prestige of the in-finite—to use Santayana's phrase in place of the experience of

In the second half of his book, Mr. Roszak points out that romanticism—the archenemy of science—has progressively been dismissed as a form of "emotional indigestion." Sometimes the charge, he admits, is justified: "So much genius flawed by so much banality." But he insists that romanticism's sense of life redeems its puerile histrionies. It struggles to save the reality of experience from evaporating into a starvation diet of theoretical abstraction or disintegrating into a chaos of bare, empirical

Romanticism, the book argues, is a critical counterpoint to the empirical advance of science, Not only in the laboratories, but also in the Christian church as well, its typical enthusiasm for things has always been regarded as a form of heresy. For whatever Christianity had borrowed from Judaism, it had left behind "the lyric spirit of prophecy, prefer-ring desiccated theological discourse."

The lid is clamped on so tight, says the author, that the dark side of the mind—the landscape of romanticism—exists only by way of negative definition, in the word unconscious.

Mr. Roszak heroically makes his way through the prophetio poems to show us how much William Blake knew, already, of our predicament. Turning to Wordsworth, he says that he felt the "speaking presence" of nature more keenly than most, that his poetry was "an archaeology of consciousness." Of Goetbe, the author remarks that he was so faithful to the idea of the natural that he even resisted spectacles when his eyes grew dim. In his Ur-Phänomen, or deep-down phenomenon, Goethe confirmed Mr. Rossak's presentiment that "mystery is truth's dancing partner." Poetry, in the author's definition, is "the therapeutic subversion of language by language; it is language doctoring its own worse disease of literalism medicine of symbolic play."

Unlike our anesthetized urbe ites, pagan or primitive peorsee reality as polyphomic, full overtones, counterpoints and r onances. Both Martha Grah and Ida Rolf, in her structu-integration therapy, have ms extensive explorations of gra tational dynamics within t body," which scientific empiricit has ignored. Coming back Goethe, the author says that, i him, a plant was not mere a plant but "a choreography symbolic gestures." In a healthy culture, the bo contends, invention would pro-erly be indistinguishable fro art and ritual and technologic progress would be simultaneous a deepening of religious consciousness. The invention of agr culture, for example, was a rijoining of technique and religio of fertility rites, rain dances a: crop rotation. A tool was origina ly an elaborately symbolized a highly decorated art object, us by those for whom work was r a bore or a burden, but a for of prayer. Today, the author s this spirit being reborn in thandicrafts of the "tribes" a communes now blossoming over the country.

We are prisoners, he says, literal surfaces, educating C young largely through letters a numbers. But the basis of learning is what Ivan Hylch di covered in Tolstoi'- great stor; that every logical premise-in h case, that "all men are mortal"has an experience attached to it Death lurks beneath this par ticular piece of logic-his own death.

Mr. Roszak feels that we can best resuscitate ourselves by setting our minds "rhapsodically fire." And we must go back to nature, flee the cities, which few are interested in saving because they are more cage than home congenial only to intellectual: and merchants.

Of course, he says, many of the current communal experiment in living will fail, but wisdor can grow out of failure and failure can be a moral victor; too. Our new religion, supporte by the same dissenters, must he a subversive force: in Buddha words, "a turning point in the deepset seat of consciousness. Mr. Roszak suggets also that ou artists relent at least from the Grand Guignol of their nihilism where "the repressed collective unconscious of our culture in being turned inside out before our eyes."

There is enough inspiration and provocation in "Where the Wasteland Ends" to fuel a thousand seminars in contemporary civilization... enough eloquence to make each reader feel in his whole self, as well as in his regenerated "sacramental consciousness," the truth of its message. Few of us will find cause for anxiety, though, in Mr. Roszak's final, gentle suggestion: "There is nothing to do, nowhere to get. Wo need only stand still in the light."

Mr. Broyord is a book reviewer for The New York Times.

Maynard, followed by three to Rich Caster in plays of 10, 79 and 80 yards.

The six touchdowns fell one short of the NFL record held by many and the yardage—schieved on just 15 completions in 28 attempts—was third best in the leagua's history for one game.

Baltimore coach Don McCafferty called Namath's performance "fantastic! Sometimes he just picked us apart and sometimes he just threw. There's no way you can adjust to a quarter-back like that."

In a game marked by records and "firsts." three accomplish-ments were notable. It was the first time the jets have beaten the Colts since they stunned the football world by winning the 1969 Super Bowl. It was Na-math's first game ever in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium, and it was the first time in Colt history they have scored 34 points in a game and lost.

The duel between Nameth and Colt master John Unites chalked up 822 net yards through the air ond height touchdowns. Namath dismantled the famed Baltimore zone pass defense, averaging 33 yards a completion. Commenting on the axiom that team can't throw long against the zone. New York head coach Weeb Ewbank said: "I've never felt that way. You've just got to read the zone and Joe is the master of reading lt." Namath's phenomenal day nul-lified a brilliant effort by Unitas, who set B Colt record of 26 completions, surpassing his previous high of 25. He clicked for 26 out of 45 throws for two touchdowns and 376 yards, the 27th time in his career he has topped the 300-yard mark.

"Sometimes things go your way, sometimes they don't," said Namath. "We noticed in the films that we might be able to beat them with some long stuff but so much depends on your receiv-ers and how they are covered.

Today, our guys were great." Namath, on his greatest day in pro football, was sacked once, the first time since 1970, but Unitas was dropped six times-three by end Mark Lomas-for 44 yards in losses.

Weiskopf to Team With Jamieson For U.S. in Golf

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (NYT).

Jim Jamleson, the Western
Open champion, and Tom Weiskopf have been named as the team that will represent the United States in the World Cup golf matches in Melbourne

Nov. 8 through 12. James Linen, president of the International Golf Association which has been sponsoring this annual event for the last 19 years, announced that 44 countries would be represented at the Royal Melbourne Golf Club's course.

The United States has won 11 times, with Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino the victors at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., last year. Nicklaus and Trevino declined invitations to defend because of other commitments and the choice of Jamieson and Welskopf. the winner of the Jackie Glesson Inversity tourney last winter, was based on selection from the Tournament Flayers Division of the Professional Golfers Association point list. Jamieson is No. 11 and Weiskopf No. 9 on the list. Gary Player, the United States PGA champion, will represent South Africa with Tienie Britz. the South African Open cham-

Finnegan Must Run for Foster's Title

LONDON, Sept. 25 (Reuters).— Bob Foster, the world light-heavyweight boxing champlon, has no doubts he will retain his title against British challenger Chris Finnegan at Wembley here tomorrow night.

"I bomb too hard for "im. It won't go the full distance," said Foster, 33, with the assurance one would expect from a man who has dominated the lightheavyweight division since 1988

when he knocked out Dick Tiger to gain the title.

Predictably, Foster's view of how the fight will go is not shared by Finnegan, 28, a southpaw who holds the European, British and Commonwealth titles.

"I've surprised people before and can do so again," said Finnegan, who in 1968 went to the Mexico Olympic Games as an unknown member of the British

Tanner's Streak Ended by Smith

LOS ANGELES, Scot, 25 (AP). -Wimbledon champion Stan Smith stopped Roscoe Tanner's upset streak with a 6-4, 6-4 victory yesterday in the $60,000 Pacific Southwest Open tennis championships.

Smith broke Tanner's service once in each set and won $10,000; Tanner collected $5,000.

Mrs. Court Wins

ALBANY, Calif. Sept. 25 (AP). -Margaret Court of Australia upset Billie Jean King, 6-4, 6-1, in the final of the $20,000 Pacific Coast women's classic yesterday.

that hy making Foster come forward he will drain the older man's strength and lift the world title with a points victory. Foster, a deputy sheriff from Alberquerque, N.M., knows that boxing team and came back with the middleweight gold medal.

Finnegan, beaten twice in 26

fights as a professional, hopes

Finnegan intends to box on the retreat. He smiles and says: T've fought men who have run before. I always catch up with

He refuses to forecast how long it will take him to catch Finnegan hut says, "The referee won't have to add up his scorecard."

In a professional career stretching over 11 and a half years, Poster has never lost to a light-beavyweight. His few defeats have been against heavyweights, including a painful experience when he met the current world champion Joe Frazier in November, 1970, and was knocked out in two rounds.

Tomorrow, Foster, 6 feet 3 inches, will have a height and reach advantage against Finnegan but the British champion says: "Once in that ring, I reckoo I'll be as tall as him."

Unlike Foster, Finnegan does not carry a big punch although he knocked out Dutchman Jan Lubbers in his last fight to re-tain his European title. The British champion, who has never been knocked down as a professional, compensates for his lack of punching power with a naggingly accurate jab and ao effective hook. And he is a superb defensive boxer.

It is this speed that could keep

Finnegan in the fight for longer than Foster expects, but few argue with the American when he says he will still be world champion after tomorrow night's fight.

Yankees Trail Boston in East By 3 Games

CLEVELAND, Sept. 25 (NYT). _1f. somehow, the New York Yankees should win the Eastern Division title, they could very well look back at one particular inning that ignited their resuscitation.

The inning was the 11th of the first game of yesterday's winning doubleheader, and the incredible five errors Cleveland made in it gave the Yankees iwo runs and a 5-4 victory. With John Ellis driving in three runs with three hits and Bobby Murcer socking his 30th homer,

They won that one. E-3, as Sparky Lyle rehered Rob Gardner in the ninth and picked up his 35th save, tying Wayne Granger's major league record. The doubleheader sweep placed dians' help in the second game.

the Yankees three games behind first-place Boston and a half game behind third-place Balti-In scoring two runs in the 11th inning of the opener, the Yankees had only one hit—a one-out bloop single by Thurman Munson, but before the next hatter, Gene Michael, was finished with his turn at bat. Duffy had three errors and the Yankees had the tie-breaking run. The farce, in which Cleveland fell two errors short of the oneinning record 1the 1905 Indians hold that one), began when Michael swung and missed on a hit-and-run play. Munson fell down hetween first and second, and the Indians thought they had an easy out. But the alert Munson knocked the ball out of Duffy's hand, and as it rolled into short right field, the catcher ran to third. With Munson at third, Michael grounded to Duffy, and the shortstop fumbled the ball long enough to lose the play at the piste to first terror No. 3), allowing Michael to reach second. Steve Miogori gave the Indians a brief respite from their version of fun and games by striking out Lindy McDaniel, hut the fun resumed when Horace Clarke top-ped a hall about 15 feet from the plate. Moses quickly fielded the ball, but he fired it into right field. Unser was just as quick in retrieving the ball ont there, but his throw back to first trying to get Clarke going back to the base went wild, too.

of us who hate to think that any of our political leaders would be involved in such a sordid affair.

Of course there are certain psychological fectors at work in such an investigation which no one can coptrol. When the President's own attorney general is asked to look into a scandal in the President's own party, there is always the suspicion that something was covered up.

The person I feel the most sorry for is the poor bureaucrat in the Justice Department who was called into his superior's office one day and told, "Hapless, the President of the United States of America wants you to investigate the Watergate bugging affair and all its ramifica-

"Even before Nov. 7?"

"Why me?"

"The President is more concerned in the illegal uses of wiretapping and bugging than he is what happens on Nov. 7. You owe it to the President and the attorney general to see that every hit of evidence in this case is available to the grand jury."

"Because the President feels that you are the best man for this job. He knows that you will not let personal considerations or your loyal feelings toward him and the great party which ha leads interfere with your objective investigation of this dastardly

"He feels, as does the attorney general, that you will do the job, regardless of jeopardy to your coming promotion or the cons quences to your future with the Justice Department."

"Is that how they feel? I didn't even know the President knew

"He might not know you personally. But he knows that the attorney general would not assign ayone to this case unless he was certain that this person could not be intimidated by men in high government positions.

"I might add that as your superior I am proud that the attorney general has selected someone from my staff. I have as much et stake in this thing as you do, Hapless. Whatever you turn up will personally reflect on me as well as this department. We shall all be watching you closely."

"Don't you have a Mafia case I could have instead?" "No, Hapless. Anyone in this department can investigate a Mafia case. But there are very few men we can trust to handle an investigation this explosive. It is your duty to our President, and the attorney general whom you will be working for, God willing, for the next four years, to give us the truth and nothing but the truth, so help you

More than one French professor has confronted me demanding to know why I have not included French... It's a matter of number of speakers. You can't elect a language to the Big Ten even if you're the whole French Academy.'

The Big Ten of the World's Languages

By William A. Krauss A IX-EN-PROVENCE, France (IHT).—No-body I know speaks Wu, but millions do.

For every man who speaks French (80 millions), slightly more than half a man speaks Wu (41 millions).

"I don't think you can dispute that Wu is wasteful," said Mrs. Jacqueline Marx, philologist, of Sao Paulo, Brazil, the other evening. Mrs. Marx is in Aix-en-Provence as part of a year-long survey of languageteaching facilities and methods in western and central Europe. "People who speak Wu and nothing else." she said, "are out of luck. And there are millions such in remote China, Culturally and economically, a sad drag is exercised on enybody forced to communicate in one of the little languages like Wu, or for that matter Dutch, Kurdish, or Norwegian.

"Nobody," she said, "can read Yeats in Pushtu, he's not available-so some 14 million Pushtu-speaking people are cut off from the civilizing mind of William Butler Yeats. Don't look for Thurber in Hauss, he's not there. In another field, the physicist or dentist who knows only Danish or Azerbaijani is light-years behind essen-tial publications in the languages of re-

A Talk

Mrs. Marx, formerly language program director of e Brazilian-American cultural institute in Sao Paulo, recalled giving e talk op South American poets at the Hague e couple of years ago to an eudience of Dutch educators and cultural leaders, Fluent in Portuguese, French, Spanish, Italian, German, English and Japanese, Mrs. Marx speeks no Dutch. She addressed the group in English. Ninety-nine percent understood her.

"Because, of course, the educated Dutchman speaks English," she said, "Often German too, to communicate with the rest of the world, which has neither time nor inclination to learn Dutch (only 19 million speakers, not far ahead of Pushtu). So if only the Hollanders, a sensitive and progressive people, could now bring themselves to chuck Dutch-and if millions of people elsewhere would give up Thai, Tiv. Greek Korean, Polish, and a couple of thousand more of the little languages—then a splendid economy of linguistic resources would be echieved and international culture would glow bright as the sun."

The balance sheet of world languages is inexact: philologists love a scuffle about what is a true language and what an advanced dialect. Is Haitian Creole a language or a baby-talk corruption of a Nor-man patois? What about Catalan? Where do you stand on Welsh? It is enough to note, as Mrs. Marx noted the other evening to a gathering of grammarians here, that the number of distinct languages spoken somewhere on earth totals between 3,000

Tower of Babel? Two hundred years ago a German scholar named Pallas published "Linguarmum Totius Orbis Vocabularia Comparativa," ("Comparative Vocabularies of All the Languages of the World"). This was a big exaggeration, because Pallas, in fact, dealt with only 200 tongues, 51 European and 149 Asian. He ignored, certainly because he knew little about, the languages of Africa, the Pacific, and most of North and South America. Between 1806 and 1817, another German, the grammarian Adelung, produced an encyclopedic survey of 500 languages and dialects-far short of the 3,000 or 4,000 the specialists

The Main Ones

"The specialists will always enjoy quibbling." Mrs. Marx went on, "but there is heartening agreement on at least the main languages, which in all the world today. on the basis of numbers of speakers, add up to exactly 149. That is, 149 languages are spoken by at least one million persons each. Begin with Afrikaans (5 million speakers) and end with Zuin (4 millions). In between the A and the Z, there's the Blg Ten-the ten languages spoken by R minimum of 100 million people each. "Only ten," said Mrs. Marx. "It makes the possibility of communication suddenly seem manageable, doesn't it? Today is close to the time when we shall all be flying around the world in an hour or two. People are crowded into each other's laps, and not only aboard airplanes. It is more than ever important they be able to talk to each other, if only to get through cus-toms. Obviously the hour is at hand to shrug off Hungarian, Bugi, Mbundu, Effic, Slovak, Swedish and such time-lag languages that contribute nothing toward sealing the bonds of brotherhood between nations and prople. In this fast developing world \.! will no longer do. Czech is a broken leg an impediment not only to the people suffering from it but to everybody else on earth, since everybody suffers from the drag of backward communications."

Nationalism

Mrs. Marx is well aware of the nationalistic aspects in the matter of languages, "One trip to Belgium," she said, "is an introduction to the extreme." Yet she is. she said, confident that common sense is making progress almost everywhere, shouldered along by the advances of science and the miracle of modern transportation. "You are not fully alive today unless you can speak at least one of the Big Ten

The Big Ten are as follows:

Mandarin Chinese, 605 millions of speakers; English, 333 millions; Great Russian, 206 millions; Spanish, 192 millions; Hindi, 192 millions; German, 120 millions; Arabic, 109 millions; Bengali, 108 millions; Portuguese, 108 millions; and Japanese, 105 mil-

"Here at lovely Aix-en-Provence." said Mrs, Marx, looking through the window down the sweep of the Cours Mirabeau, "more than one French professor has confronted me demanding to know why I have not incloded French among the Big Ten. I have to answer that it's a matter of number of speakers, and that I can't do anything about it. You can't elect a language to the Big Ten, even if you're the whole Prench Academy."

will get a hig dose of it this fall I was doing a television show with the nationwide tour of four names that can warm the memories of anyone over 40: Frankie Carle, Bob Crosby, Freddy Martin and Margaret Whiting. They star in "Big Band Cavalcade," R musical package that premiered in Fresno, California, recently and will be on the road until the final date in Seattle, Washington, Dec. 3. The schedule is enough to weary a youthful rock group, 80 cities in 84 days.

"It's so marvelous to play before sudiences who are hearing the big-band sound for the first time in years," said Martin, who had the idea for the tour, "All they hear nowadays is the rock 'n' roll sound, which isn't the same. Twe done a lot of touring, and I find that it isn't just the older folks who like our kind of music. I've played a lot of college dates, and we have many sched-uled on this tour. There's a lot of music in colleges, you know; not just rock, but marching bands and serious music. The students enjoy hearing big-band music played by topflight musicians."

A rehearsal in Hollywood featured the 30-year-old hits of the four stars: Martin's Tonight We Love" and "Warsaw Concerto," Crosby's "Muskrat Ramble" and South Rampart Street Parade, Carle's "Sunrise Serenade" and "Hindustan," Whiting's, "It Might as Well Be Spring" and "Moonlight in Vermont."

Catching up, Whiting: "I've kept pretty busy, playing night chibs and concerts. I'm looking forward to the trip, because I never sang with e band; that was one thing I missed. I find a lot of people have nostalgia for the 1940s, and no wonder. These are unhappy times. People like to look back on when the war was over—the real war—and times were beginning to get affluent. People were united then. It's not

Carie: "I haven't had a full band in 12 years; I take along a rhythm section with me on dates. I was inactive for a while, just making records, but in the last couple of years I've been busy again. I've played six months a year in Las Vegas. Nostalgia? I love it. It brings back my kind of music. But I've got to please the young crowd as well as the oldtimers, so I throw in fast numbers like 'Carle's Boogie'."

Crosby: "I was out of the music

America's craze for nostalgia business from 1964 to 1967, w Australia, Now I'm living in Jolla, and I have to hit the so I can afford to live in Jolla, I play about 150 date year, mostly in the East and I west, where Dixieland is popular. There's somet strange about Dixieland. It always remained popular, I d. think it's postelgia. It's just go

Martin: "I got the idea for tour when I went on the roac Guy Lombardo. When his bro Carmen died, Guy asked me take over for him on his tor found that andiences were mendously receptive to the style of music. I suggested a of four stars to Columbia Art. which was very receptive. It a year and a half to line evthing up. If this tour succeed think we'll be doing more o. next year."

Amid charges from femir that the affair is vulgar, the tr annual week dedicated to watching is under way at Cent-City, a Los Angeles suburb. At Sunday opening, officials at office-shopping center com said it was a light-hearted trik to the beauty of women-fea ing a contest for the "most wa: able girl" But Virginia L.
